4. Date(s) on which the event will be held:

4 November 2017

5. Participation:
   A) How many GSAS participants are expected?
   B) How many others are expected?

~35 GSAS participants are expected, while ~15 others are expected from Harvard College, other Harvard graduate schools, MIT, and the greater Boston area.

6. Describe the event briefly:

This is a new event for our organisation. The Singaporean film industry has had a colourful history, with both ‘heartland’ films with strong local contexts, and more introspective, niche pieces featuring strongly in Singaporean cinema in recent decades. We would like to further explore this aspect of Singaporean culture through our events.

We plan to screen an example of the latter category of films. ‘Pop Aye’ is Singaporean director Kirsten Tan’s debut feature film, and premiered at the 2017 Sundance Film Festival. It has recently been selected as Singapore’s entry for the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film at the 90th Academy Awards.

We will screen the film, accompanied by Singaporean and Malaysian refreshments and snacks, and allow for ample opportunity for discussion thereafter regarding both the film and the state of Singaporean and Malaysian cinema.
